Hi Polly,

It's good to hear from you! I gave the Second Opinion to my GP and my renal doctor, I believe in August. They both felt that made COMPLETE sense and I was taken off the Crestor and Prednisone immediately. Since then, I have been monitored every three weeks with bloodwork, and frequent office visits to keep on top of it, in case it continued to nose dive as it had before. As of January of this year, my numbers have remained level and stay fairly consistent. At my last office visit, I was told I didn't have to have bloodwork for four months! The Second Opinion, I believe, saved my life. It wasn't in time to change the damage already done, but I believe that it has extended the time I do have...which certainly would be shorter without MediGuide's wonderful, top-notch physicians and the diligent work you (and perhaps others there) did to give those doctors a thorough picture of my case.

If you need any more "testimonial", I will praise it from the roof (and I'm afraid of heights)!!!! If you're ever out this way, stop in at the nursery and say hi.

Best Regard's,
